ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The National Conference on “Conforming Next Generation Drug Design and Delivery” focuses on recent advances and innovative strategies in molecular design, formulation development, and advanced delivery systems. The conference aims to provide a dynamic platform for academicians, researchers, industry experts, healthcare professionals, and students to exchange ideas, present research outcomes, and discuss future directions in therapeutic development.

This conference emphasizes innovation-driven research, translational science, and emerging technologies shaping next-generation therapeutic solutions.

Objectives of the Conference

- To highlight recent advancements in drug design and delivery systems
- To promote innovative research and translational approaches
- To encourage interdisciplinary interaction among researchers and professionals
- To discuss challenges and opportunities in next-generation therapeutic development
- To provide a platform for students and young researchers to present their research
- To strengthen academic–industry collaboration
